GUIDELINES

1. The Guyana Bar Review is intended primarily to facilitate discussion, debate and dissemination of information on legal issues and developments impacting on the practice of law in Guyana and in the Commonwealth Caribbean. However, the Editorial Committee of The Bar Association of Guyana welcomes, and will consider for publication, contributions on a broader (international and socio-economic) scale.
2. Articles should not exceed 7,500 words and case notes, reviews and other submissions should not exceed 2,500 words. Endnotes should be numbered consecutively using standard numbering and should be typed clearly. A short biographical note should accompany all submissions.
3. All material must be type written and in English, double spaced in no less than size 12 of any standard font. The material must be an original work previously unpublished. Conference papers and other oral presentations may also be submitted for publication.
4. Material should be submitted electronically, either by email or otherwise adhering at all times to the rules of citation and style recommended by "A Uniform System of Citation", a publication of the Harvard Law Review Association. Hard copies may also be submitted.
5. Unless reserved, copyright in the material shall reside in the publishers on the articles being accepted for publication in the Review.
